A big 250 pound weight of a man, his broad, beefy shours and a rusty overcoat, draped about him with a care as air. His double buttoned froce coat was unbuttoned at the front, and his vest was not free from cust. His goots, for this partiaren wore poots, and not been acked since morning, and his high collar was wifed cown with the work of the day. Out of this collar rose a fringe of iron gray silver strands, much like the beard of Horace Greeley, and this fringe formed the setting of a face nor unlike that of the late editor of The Tribune. Eyes as blue as the skies of June looked out over iron spectacles, and as much of a high forehead as could be seen under the No. 10 plug hat, which was pushed down over it, bulged out with brains. This patriarch as i a rinc look and a friendly word for his acquaintances as they passed by, and every one knew him. Those who are forc of tracing a natural proneness in the suicessive members of a single family to follow in the same footsteps, will incisometring to study in the family history of the late Chief Justice Waite, of the United States supreme court. As far back as the cays of Oliver Cromwell, Thomas Waite, a member of the house of commons in England, a "Roundhend." was whe of the judges who condemned Charles I to the alock, and put his signature to the death warrant. in America, Jun White, of Malcen. Mass., was a nember of the general court, of that colony and a terwards speaker of the colonial house of representatives. From Tromas Waite and Mary Bronson of Connect cut, ma ried in 170s, came that arench of the family best known Curing the instand the present century. Their grantson, Mirvin Waite, was a lawyer, and was nin-teen times chosen to the general assembly of Connecticut. His son, coan T. Wate, C. Norwica, was long a representative of the state in congress. Another grandson o Thomas Waite was Remica Waite, of Lyme, Conn. His fourth son was a member of the Connecticut legislature; and became justice of the supreme court of the state in 1834. The oldest of his eight chi dren was Chief Justice Waite, who has a st clear . . Morrison Lemich Vaite was born at Lyme, Com., Nov. 29, 1816, was gradua ed at Yr e college in 1837, and returned to Lyma to study law in his father's office.

George M. Williams and Caleb Cusning were successively nominated and windrawn. Finally, on an. 19, 1874, Mr. Waite's rame was send to the senate while he was presiding over the convention in Ohi and ignorant of President Grant's procedure. A telegram was brought to Rufus Ring, a member of the convention, who arose and real the announcement of Lr. Waite's appointment, whereupon the convention oursa into vocilerous applause. The nomination was anau mously confirmed, and on oath of office and at price entered upon its cuties.

The most important of Justice Waite's decisions were in the civil rights cases, .878; polygamy cases 1879; the constitutional amendments, 1380, and three decisions in 1881. These were—one regarding the powers of remove. by the president, one on polyging cases, and one on the Virginia bond case. It 1888 two impor-tant decisions were given covering the civil rights ac ...
